Editorial Review

From Booklist

Book 14 in the Pretty Little Liars series opens with confirmation of what our favorite little liars—Spencer, Hanna, Aria, and Emily—were slowly piecing together: Alison DiLaurentis is A. The actual Alison, not her (late) twin, Courtney, or even Alison pretending to be Courtney pretending to be Alison. If that last sentence creates whiplash, the rest of the novel might, too, and the reveal of “Helper A” also pulls threads from much earlier in the series. In retribution for the Liars going to the police with A’s notes and threats, the girls face very grave consequences for the death of Tabitha (remember her?) in Jamaica. Ali sends the police a doctored video of the girls beating Tabitha, which lands them in legal and personal trouble. However, before they are shipped off to face charges in Jamaica, the girls find themselves in one more deadly confrontation with A and her helper. Devoted fans of the series will rejoice knowing there’s more to come in the next installment. Grades 7-10. --Courtney Jones

From the Back Cover

In Rosewood, news vans lurk outside gated drives and FBI agents are knocking on every mansion door—and it's all because four very pretty liars simply don't know how to be good. Spencer, Hanna, Emily, and Aria have been keeping killer secrets for an entire year . . . things that could land them in jail if A ever told. And now A has.

One by one, the girls' worst deeds come out, and their worlds come crashing down around them. Spencer gets kicked out of Princeton. Hanna gets kicked out of her dad's campaign—and his heart. Emily gets kicked to the curb. And Aria may get kicked out of the country.

The girls are the lowest they've ever been. They've lost everything. But A's not done yet. If A's deadly plan succeeds, the liars will have told their last lie. . . .
